

What-If

[Video begins]

[Speaker Voiceover] In this tutorial we will show you how to use the “What-If” feature of DegreeWorks. This will show you how changes in your program of study will impact your degree completion. We will see how changing the degree, major, minor, and concentration impact your audit.

To begin, select “What-If” on the worksheet tab. If your degree will be different, you can change the selection in the first box. Next, you can choose a new major. The list of majors is determined by the degree you chose above. Select a minor or minors if appropriate. Also select a concentration if appropriate. Note that concentrations are not currently filtered by major, therefore you must be careful to select an appropriate concentration for your major or your results may not be accurate. Consult the undergraduate catalog and/or your advisor if you have any questions about minors or concentrations.

At any time you may remove any of these selections. Simply highlight the selection you want to remove then click the “Remove” button underneath the box. Once you have selected your criteria, click the “Process What-If” button to see how your current classes apply towards the new program of study. Scroll through the audit to see the changes. Please note that running a What-If is for scenario purposes only. It does not mean you have changed your major. You also cannot save the What-If audit. We hope that you find the What-If feature useful. If you have questions about DegreeWorks, please visit the “Frequently Asked Questions” tab at the top of the page.
